

ANGLO AMERICAN, THE TIDE IN ALASKA IS STRONG. AND IT'S AGAINST THE PEBBLE MINE.

Eighty percent of Bristol Bay, Alaska, residents oppose the Pebble Mine* – and for good reason. The mine will industrialize the wilds of Alaska, generate up to 10 billion tons of contaminated mine waste, and jeopardise the world's largest remaining wild sockeye salmon fishery – and the communities that depend on it. A fishery, that is in fact a major source of tinned salmon for the British. In short, Anglo American's proposal threatens the way of life for commercial fishermen, local communities, Yupik Eskimos and other native people of Bristol Bay, and dinner, right here in London.

Join the rising tide of opposition at

OURBRISTOLBAY.COM

*Craciun Research. Summary Report: Bristol Bay Residents Views on Development, A Market Research Report for Nunamta Aulukestai, September 18, 2009.

TOP ROW, FROM LEFT TO RIGHT: Trout Unlimited, Matt Davidson, Nick Hall Photography BOTTOM ROW: ©2009 Robert Glenn Ketchum www.robertglennketchum.com